

Loss of dedicated teacher at Brockhill

Peter Catmull, Assistant Principal at Brockhill Park Performing Arts College died on Tuesday after a long and bravely fought illness. Peter was Assistant Principal at the college as well as being an excellent teacher of Drama. He worked at Brockhill for 37 years and touched the lives of so many students, colleagues and parents during his career.

It is testament to Peter's courage and bravery that that he continued to work throughout his illness and was teaching until the last week before the February holiday as he remained totally committed and focused upon the success of his Year 13 students who were presenting their Drama A Level Practical examination. As ever, with Peter's guidance they performed splendidly.

Brockhill is working as normally as it can through this difficult time and reflecting quietly on how best to celebrate Peter's life and magnificent contribution to education.

Loved by so many at Brockhill and in the wider community Peter remained a very private man and our thoughts are now with Peter's immediate family and closest friends.
